

MEDICAL.

A FOOL'S ADVICE.

Let us look on the beauties of nature, nor school ourselves to be happy by rote and by rule; let us learn the earth's lesson, and declare the sun rolls. If you please, with the moon on his arm round the pole.

Let us draw on the skies
No meridian lines,
Nor straining our eyes,
Seek divisions and signs;
Let the day to night without counting its hours,
And the season be known by the blossoms and flowers.

O, let's not endeavor to fathom the laws
Of motion and matter, nor seek for the cause
Of form and of color; it is useless to cure
Why heaven's above earth, if it only is there;
We should only perceive
The design of the whole
And the heart to relieve
And to gladden the soul;
Let us live in this world unanxious, unperplexed,
And willingly wait to be wise in the next.

BRILLIANT BOUTEILLE.

How He Touched up Democratic Economy and Reform.

[Full text of the speech of Hon. C. A. Boutelle, of Maine, in the House of Representatives January 15.]

Mr. Speaker, what a comical old humbug the Democratic party is. [Laughter.] Well, it is laughable. Year after year, congress after congress, the same old song, the same old tune, on one string. [Laughter.] I stood here yesterday and looked at the other side of this hall when the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Holman], the distinguished chairman of the committee on appropriations, stood up, and while the brethren gathered around him administered to them in allopathic doses the medicine of retrenchment and reform. There was something so familiar about the grouping that I tried to recall where it was that I had seen or heard or read of something of that kind before.

Finally it all came back to me; it was simply history repeating itself; and this remarkable episode and spectacle was simply a reproduction of the prophecy of Dickens, and the picture of Cruikshank, when they depicted, the one in description, the other with his pencil, that famous scene where Mrs. Squeers gathered the boys around her at Dotheboys hall and administered to them with a long spoon their doses of brimstone and treacle (retrenchment and reform) for the purpose of breaking down their appetites and saving provisions. [Great laughter.] I knew you would recognize the picture, and the only feeling of melancholy I have in connection with it is that Dickens died before seeing the realization of his dream.

Oh, yes; it was all according to programme, all familiar, even when our friend, Mr. Pecksniff, arose and, with tally in one hand and amendment in the other, undertook to forward the great on-moving car of retrenchment and reform. And then our other old friend, the Rev. Mr. Chubb, of Kentucky, comes in with "Bless you, my children," and pronounces the benediction. [Laughter.]

Why, Mr. Speaker, there was more of history and fun condensed in yesterday afternoon's proceedings than I have ever witnessed before in a week.

There was our volatile friend from Alabama, General Wheeler, a gentleman who always leaps upon the back of the great question of debate, to "ride the whirlwind and direct the storm," with an impetuosity which reminds one of the manner in which a representative of the Darwinian theory would ride upon the back of an elephant in a circus. [Laughter.]

He started out, Mr. Speaker—I am always interested in what he says, and more interested in the way he says it—he started out yesterday morning to "hurl" something or other back "with scorn" [laughter]; but he omitted to sufficiently lubricate his "hurler," and in some way or other got into difficulty before he was through. [Laughter.] He opened out like a calico on a Mississippi river steambot, and he wound up like a sand-peep in the last stages of asthma. [Laughter.] He reminded me—for these events were full of suggestiveness to a quiet onlooker—he reminded me of one of those modern patent dolls of Edison's, with a phonograph inside. Those of you who have ever practiced with that instrument may remember that sometimes an imperfect cylinder is shoved into the machine, so that from the full diapason of a brass band you run down to a feeble squeak when the diaphragm needle gets out of the groove. [Laughter.]

From the way the gentleman started and the way he ended I was afraid something had broken inside of him. [Loud laughter.] The loftiness of his aerial flight and the suddenness of his descent reminded me of the excuse the Irishman made for being bow-legged, when he said he went up in a balloon once and walked back. [Laughter.]

Then there was our distinguished friend from Missouri [Mr. Dockery], a gentleman who is haunted all the time by the nightmare of apprehension that he is too good looking to be taken for a Democrat [laughter], and who therefore feels obliged to enter a protest on all possible occasions to keep up the assurance of his party orthodoxy. Why, he does look like a first-class, clean-cut, well-conditioned Republican citizen, proud of his country, its glorious achievements and possibilities; yet when he rises to speak in this house he undergoes a transformation beyond my power of description.

From the expression of countenance that he adopts on such occasions, and that pained tone, that exceedingly distressing sound that he attaches to his oratorical efforts, I cannot help thinking that making a Democratic speech actually goes against his system. [Laughter.]

And behind all this, the stage manager, the gentleman from Indiana, undertaking to start the reform exhibition by protestations to the people in advance; trying the old game of throwing out a cloud of proclamations without regard to performances to succeed them; proposing to deal with this great nation and its illimitable responsibilities and destinies as though it were a nickel-in-the-slot machine, and even then, trying to beat the machine by dropping a bogus nickel in the slot. [Great laughter and applause on the Republican side.]

Now, Mr. Speaker, I am somewhat tired after all my amusement with this sort of performance presented in this house in the name of legislation. I have been watching with a great deal of care and curiosity, I have read with more attentiveness and regularity than is good for my mental health or my moral condition the record of the pretensions and the expressions of the leaders of the Democratic party extant to-day, and in the last six months I have found only one expression from a Democratic source that rises to the level of American patriotism, and that came from the lips of a woman, the estimable lady who is now presiding over the executive mansion in the State of New York.

Some of you may have read the account, and I cite from a leading Democratic journal the experiences of the wife of one of our former associates here on her arrival at the executive mansion in Albany, an executive mansion provided by a "profligate legislature" to enable the governor of that state to live in what some of our friends who have spoken here to-day would designate as "ostentatious affluence." [Laughter.] I say that some of you may have read, as I did, in the columns of the New York World, an account of that lady's experience in undertaking to bring order out of the chaos that had resulted in that establishment after two successive periods of Democratic "retrenchment and reform." I will not detain the house by going into the particulars of how that lady's tasteful sensibilities were shocked by finding a profusion of lemon squeezers and a deficit of napkins, by finding cigar stumps in the sugar bowl and poker chips in the state prayer book. [Laughter and applause.]

I say I will not detain the house by going into these particulars, or citing how they were obliged to pull down the lithographs, chromos and opera bouffe actresses and burlesque opera dancers, in order to redress the historic features of DeWitt Clinton, Samuel J. Tilden, and the other sages and statesmen of the Empire state. [Laughter.] But I want to read you from the same Democratic authority the one patriotic sentence, the one solitary expression that I have heard from any Democratic quarter for six months past, and, as I say, that fell from the lips of a woman.

Before repeating it, Mr. Speaker, I may say that, as "out of the mouths of babes and sucklings" we may find wisdom, this good lady was under no bonds to anybody to speak anything but the truth or utter anything but common sense, and standing as she did in this arena where two Democratic bachelor governors had been illustrating all the peculiar virtues of Democracy [laughter] for an extended period of years, looking over the devastation that had been wrought with an eye single to repairing the damage and restoring the executive mansion to a respectable basis of habitation for the public service, in reply to a question as to whether retrenchment and reform had left this splendid establishment in such shape that the new governor could give a dinner to his friends, she answered in the negative by saying:

"Oh, no, I have not begun to think about a state dinner. With the present condition of things I should not be able to serve a breakfast of sixteen covers properly." [Laughter.]

How that most delightful my distinguished and honorable friend from Indiana. [Laughter.] If she had only said they did not have enough coal left for the kitchen range to boil a cold mess of potatoes I think my friend from Indiana would want to move to New York without delay. [Laughter.]

"Then, too, the butler's pantry is in such bad shape that it will have to be completely overhauled. Why, a New York butler would feel insulted if asked to use it, even temporarily."

I presume that Gov. Cleveland and Gov. Hill had been employing a butler from Indiana. [Laughter on the Republican side.] But what I want to call the attention of the house to is contained in the following paragraph. Gov. Flower and his wife evidently do not think it is necessary even for a Democratic governor of the State of New York to go about with his elbows out of his coat for the purpose of flaunting the flag of truth toward the Democratic house now in session. [Renewed laughter on the Republican side.]

They propose to live in a respectable, decorous, civilized, refined and proper manner. And, Democrat as he is, I hope to pay my respects to Gov. Flower in that same executive mansion, after they have had it repaired and refitted.

But in making the necessary purchases for placing the edifice in a condition befitting the official residence of the chief magistrate of the grandest of the American states it ought to please every American citizen as it pleases me, that the wife of the governor of New York is willing to say, and does say without hesitation, that in order to put that establishment in the highest state of efficiency she is not obliged to go beyond the confines of the American republic to find every article that may be needed. [Applause on the Republican side.]

On the Threshold.

Standing at womanhood's door is she,
Clad in her virgin purity,
A creature fair as the lilies be,
And, like the lilies, alas, how frail!

They are borne to earth when the storms prevail,
And their life goes out in the summer gale.

When we see a frail and lovely creature standing on the threshold between girlhood and womanhood, we shiver with a fear of what may be, because we have seen so many succumb at this critical period of life. What is needed at this time is a tonic and invigorant—something that will promote proper functional action of the female organs. The only remedy to be depended on is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This unequalled medicine, which cures diseases peculiar to women, is especially valuable at the period when the girl crosses the threshold of womanhood. Used at such a time, it never fails to produce a most beneficial result, and many a fragile girl has been tidied over one of life's most trying periods by it.

William Stevens, of Glenwood, Ore., was found dead in his bed a few days ago with a fallen tree across his cabin.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. Logan Drug Co., Druggists.

GENTLEMEN:—I commenced using your Inhaler some three months ago, and have received such decided benefit from it that I believe it will entirely cure the catarrh with which I have suffered for some years. It far exceeds anything that I have ever used, and I have tried about everything.

The Features of the Money and Stock Markets.

New York, Jan. 21.—Money on call easy at 1 1/2 to 2 per cent, last loan 2 per cent, closed offered at 2 per cent. Prime mercantile paper 4 1/2 per cent. Sterling exchange quiet but firm at $1 83 1/2. Sales of stocks today were 414,662 shares.

The great strength, which was the feature of the stock market yesterday, was lacking to-day, and in its place there was a general feeling of uncertainty, the result of the room traders, who have not yet covered their shorts. There was an attempt to cover at the opening, but the advance was lost almost immediately. The first sales, which extended to 1/2 per cent in Louisville & Nashville, changed the tactics, and drives were made from time to time here and there, but the market was not sustained, and prices to-night are practically where they were yesterday. The industrials were stronger than usual of late. The great feature of the day, however, was the sudden and great strength in the coal, especially Lackawanna and Reading. The movement, however, was only sufficient to recover the early losses in Reading. The lumber and iron stocks were very large, while Lackawanna showed a substantial gain. The general list was in the main, quiet and held within narrow limits, becoming heavy in the forenoon, but rallying in the last hour with the upward movement in Lackawanna. The close was quiet and generally firm at insignificant changes, with advances and losses about equally divided.

Landed bonds were fairly active. Sales $2,785,000.

Government and state bonds dull and steady.
